Spiritual Bouquet Receives Pope's Recognition

Offering By Clarke Students Is Lauded in Vatican
Daily

Copies of L'Osservatore Romano, the Vatican daily, bearing an article of special interest to students and friends of Clarke have been received at the college. It is entitled "Omaggio dell' Arcidiocesi di Dubuque" and therein is described the recent visit of his Excellency, Archbishop Beckman at the Vatican and his private audience with Pope Pius XI.

The Archbishop presented the Holy Father with a collection of beautiful spiritual bouquets, in honor of our Pontiff's 75th birthday. These bouquets represented Masses, Communions, and other acts of devotion from the Catholics throughout the entire archdiocese. Prelates, priests, religious communities, colleges, sodalities and private individuals were alike represented in the offerings. The account continues by describing the rich ornamentation and artistic design of the gifts. The article speaks enthusiastically of the gratifying display of filial love and fidelity which are so evident in such an act of homage, as well as of the joy and happiness of the Vicar of Christ in receiving such an expression of religious ardor from so many of the Faithful.

One of the bouquets was selected as an example of what has been expressed in the preceding paragraphs. The one chosen to be described and quoted was that sent by Clarke College. The following is a translation from the Italian of the letter which accompanied the gift:

"Prostrate before Your Holiness, and prompted by grateful love and deepest veneration, we the Students of Clarke College, under the supervision of the Sisters of Charity of the Blessed Virgin Mary, of the Archdiocese of Dubuque, Iowa, beg you to accept our heartfelt felicitations on this the seventy-fifth anniversary of your birth.

In gratitude to God Who with special design has willed that Your Holiness should rule the Church so long and so wisely, and with the earnest petition that He may prolong your glorious reign for many happy years, our united filial love goes forth to the Giver of all good gifts, and to you the supreme shepherd of Christ's flock upon earth.

The spiritual garland which we lovingly present on our knees is a token of our reverent loyalty and our filial affection."

New Equipment In Laboratory

The Biology department has added much to its equipment during the past year in the form of contributed pathological specimens and of material prepared by the students in the Zoology and Physiology classes. These specimens will prove an invaluable aid in the study of anatomy and physiology.

The pathological material is beautifully preserved and mounted in demonstration jars, with all the proper data cited on labels. Some of this material will be used in the preparation of microscopic slides. Skeletons representing each class of the Vertebrata have been prepared by the students. It is expected that the Repetilia will soon be added to complete the collection.

A well balanced Aquarium supplies the Zoology class with living specimens. There are also many cultures, such as the Hydra which have been maintained for over a period of two years. A Tarrarium, which will be used in connection with the classes, is in the process of construction.

Seniors Will Hang '32 Class Picture

The traditional ceremony accompanying the hanging of the picture of the class of 1932 will be observed, Saturday evening, October 22, at 7:30 p. m., in the Mount St. Joseph assembly hall.

The Seniors in cap and gown, will take part in the customary observances and will open the program with a choral number, "Our Yesterdays" by Herbert Leslie. Following this selection the 1932 Class Poem will be read by Miss Dorothy Aurit, Dubuque. "Reflections dans l'eau", a piano solo will be given by Miss Alice Heath, Waterloo. After the reading of the letters the Pledge to Alma Mater is to be given.

The 1932 class roll, messages and information concerning last year's graduates, the poem and musical selections, all give promise of an interesting and varied program vibrant with memories of friends and former students. After the picture is placed in Alumnae Corridor, the singing of the college song will conclude the program.

Mrs. Finan to Give Lecture at Clarke

"Catholic Youth and Leadership" is the subject of the lecture to be given by Mrs. Mary Blake Finan in the Clarke college auditorium, Saturday morning, October 22, at 11 o'clock.

Years of experience in the field of sociology equip Mrs. Finan with a thorough knowledge of her subject. Her effective social work in Chicago has made her an internationally known Catholic leader. Following the reception of her degree from Clarke college, the speaker filled numerous important positions. As president of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae, Mrs. Finan distinguished herself in degree by her excellent work. This organization, which includes members in every state in the Union, in Canada, and in various European countries, proudly boasts of its past leader. The knowledge of the work carried on by the Federation, its interest and activity in giving aid to society, and the results accomplished by it, increase the prestige Mrs. Finan has merited in the field of social work.

It is with great pleasure that the faculty and students of Clarke anticipate the lecture and visit of this charming and illustrious alumna.

Patriotic Program On Constitution Is Presented

"Safeguarding the Constitution" Is Title of Historical Sketch

"Safeguarding the Constitution", a patriotic and historical program presented by students of the American Government and Education classes of Clarke college, took place in the auditorium Monday evening, October 17, at 8 o'clock.

The program, as explained in the introductory speech, was inspired by the appeal of late Senator Lodge to spread knowledge of the Constitution—"that great document which forms the firm basis of our government." In his writings, the Senator entreated that America combat the heresies of men who think they can formulate a better government than that of the present, and who would throw away liberty for its counterfeit.

In accordance with this great educational movement in behalf of the appreciation and intelligent understanding of our Constitution, the late Cardinal Gibbons was quoted as having said, "Teach them the reasonableness, the completeness, the grandeur of the Constitution of the United States, for, next to the worship of God, no higher duty lies within the range of clerical obligation than that of stimulating patriotism."

The ideals of America were presented in the second number of the program and were emphasized in the "Mock Session", which immediately followed. This included the point of diversion and discussion of the Constitutional Convention, the Three Fifties Compromise.

"American ideals find expression in democracy, self-restraint, and self-reliance," said the speaker. Democracy is divided into subdivisions—equality, liberty, and sovereignty of the people. These have all been traced back to the Catholic Church and are not, as popular opinion would have it, of puritanical origin. Self-restraint was reserved for Catholicism to teach in the belief that "all men are created to the image and likeness of God", and "the first and most potent factor in American people is self-reliance." It is this ideal that has enabled America, to form a government which all countries, excepting France, thought impossible. It has begotten explorers, great presidents, and many famous men who entrusted their care to God and to themselves.

"Counting the Electoral Vote" was an intelligent talk presenting the procedure of the Senate and the Electoral College, as the convention of choosing the president and vice-president is conducted. In an artistic conclusion, a colorful tableau of the forty-eight states, grouped about (Continued on page 4)

Conversation Room For Languages

The conversation room of the Romance Language department is a new feature at Clarke college this year. The charm of the room rests in the fact that it is truly reminiscent of foreign lands.

Flags of countries which participated in the Exposition Ibero-Americana of Seville hang gracefully from the molding, forming a unique border. Appropriate shields and pictures decorate the lower walls. Representing France are the Fleur-de-lis of the Monarchy, the Napoleonic Eagle, and the flag of the Third Republic, imported from France. The Italian flag also has a prominent place.

A striking feature of the room is a lamp which bears on its sides the coat-of-arms of Italy, the insignia of Spain, the Napoleonic Eagle, and the American Eagle.

The conversation room also contains a second-class relic—a plaque made from the tree at Paray-de-Monial where Saint Margaret Mary saw an apparition.

The Holy Angels

WE are taught that angels are spirits which cannot be perceived with bodily eyes . . . they are represented throughout the Bible as incorporeal beings who frequently appear in the role of God's messengers to mankind. It is through them that He often communicates His Will to men. Each one of us individually is said to possess a tutelary angel.

The Church has stated her view on the existence of angelic beings through the Fourth Lateran Council in which it was laid down that they were created . . . and are therefore subjects, as are all other creatures, to the dominion of God.

We are all familiar with the numerous narratives recounted in the Bible in which angels have held the leading roles. For example, let us cite the most renowned instance of all, that in which the angel Gabriel announced to the Blessed Virgin Mary that she was to be the Mother of God; then there are the stories of Jacob's visions of angels in which these angelic spirits are described as ascending and descending the ladder which stretches from heaven to earth; there are besides a host of other Biblical stories.

One of the most important of these narratives dealing with angels, and one which ought to be especially well-known to us is that of the angel Ra-phael who, the Bible states, was fellow-traveller and guide for the young Tobias, and who also gave him the means of curing his father, the elder Tobias, of his blindness . . . We should be particularly interested in the angel Raphael whose feast we celebrate on the twenty-fourth of this month, because the diocese of Dubuque of which we are members is dedicated to Ra-phael and its cathedral is named in honor of him. Raphael is said to be one of the glorious seven angels who stand before the throne of God with trumpets in hand. But of these seven angels only three are mentioned in the canonical Scriptures; they are Gabriel, Michael, and Raphael.

Angels, as we know, are attendants upon the throne of God in the court of heaven. They are also intermediates between God and men; they are His special and trusted messengers.
The whole divine story of the Bible is radiantly lighted with the episodes of the angels. What is of especial import is that each individual soul has its own angel to guard, to protect, and to enlighten, at all times; be it in sorrow or joy; danger or ease; war or peace; sickness or health; riches or poverty.
This guardian angel is ever urging us in our Path of Life to keep to the narrow way at the end of which awaits us, despite hardships on the journey, our eternal happiness in a life with God.

So it is that we should, at all times, be aware of the ever-guarding presence of the holy angels over each one of us individually, and we may all join together in our devotions to them by lifting hearts and voices to God as we chant in unison the prayer to our Angel Guardian.

Adventuring

OCTOBER'S blue sky and bluer stretches of water challenge the imagination to picture anew that scene, the lustre of which forty-four decades have not dimmed—the landing of Columbus on the island of San Salvador.

Vivid green, lazily waving palms, gay plumage, birds, subtle fragrances, sapphire sky, shining sands, aquamarine bay—and riding at anchor a brave little squadron of three small Spanish galleons. The scene represents achievement, the accomplished goal of strong desires. This phase of the situation is unaffected by the fact that it was a new world and not India which Columbus had reached. The qualities by the exercise of which he attained his purpose are the points of interest to us.

To attempt the new and untried; to fare forth on uncharted seas; to continue a forward course when every outward circumstance urges a return to known and less hazardous paths; all this levies a heavy toll on even an indomitable spirit, supported though it be by knowledge, persistence, and the flame of zealous faith. And these were the characteristics of Columbus.

Realizing as he did that the theories and experiments which he advanced would necessarily meet with little sympathy from those who did not share his spirit of adventure and discovery, he piously and steadfastly worked for the fulfillment of his hopes, through long, seemingly hopeless years. A strong faith in his mission and in his God must have been the anchor for his soul through heartbreaking vicissitudes. When finally the fulfillment of his vision came, well might the historian apply to him the words of the psalmist:

"They that go down to the sea in ships, doing business in great waters, These have seen the works of the Lord, and his wonders in the deep."

Angels at Clarke

Since the night when the first "Gloria" of the angels echoed and re-echoed among the hills of Judea, those triumphant notes of love and rejoicing have never ceased to be chanted by them. They have kept their vigil through the ages, and they have watched, and glorified God though often man has forgotten.

Every morning, when the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass is being offered at Clarke, there is an unseen host of angels who keep guard around their King; every moment of the day and night, radiant though invisible, some of their numbers are there in adoration. A memorial to them is the two angel statues at each side of the altar in the Chapel of the Sacred Heart. With hands clasped reverently and eyes turned watch-fully toward the tabernacle they are a visible reminder of that shining legion of flame-winged angels who always hover near, especially at Holy Mass. Their heads are inclined slightly toward the altar as though intent not to miss a moment of the Holy Sacrifice. They are all eagerness, all attention, paying homage to their King. Their graceful wings are at rest for they have reached the tabernacle, and their lips are parted, seeming about to utter an angel's homage of "Gloria."

The angels not only keep their vigil in our chapel but they are at our sides everywhere. Perhaps the busiest thoroughfare of Clarke is the main corridor of the Administration building, and here also are symbols of these angelic beings. Two large plaques in old ivory bearing the images of angels hang on either side of the "Round" in the main corridor. Three angels are carved on each plaque. They appear to be walking toward some definite goal, and are a gracious reminder of those invisible companions of ours whose soft tread accompanies us wherever we go; who protect us and guide our footsteps and who, by so doing, give honor and glory to God.

Those angels who are fighting to outwit Satan in the conquest for souls are represented by a statue of Michael the Archangel in the college art studio. Here is imaged the 'angel of battle' with a sword held over Satan's head, as though answering our prayer of "St. Michael the Archangel, defend us in battle; be our protection against the malice and snares of the devil . . ."

In leaving the building, the angels are still with us. Clarke has again especially honored them by placing a guardian angel statuary group on a lovely spot, that in consequence of this memorial, is called Angel Campus. The angel is looking toward heaven as if supplicating God's mercy and protection on His children. Beside him stands a little child whose faltering steps are guided by the firm hand on his shoulder and the widespread wings which seem ready to enfold him should danger be in his path. Angel Campus is one of the loveliest of the grounds surrounding Clarke, and with its quiet peace, its natural beauty, particularly its pine trees rising high into the blue heavens, is a fitting dedication to the angels.

Back to the chapel at night, and the gentle rustle of angel wings may almost be heard. What Clarke girl does not know our chapel at night, when there is no light but the roseate glow of the luminous sanctuary lamp, the protecting shadows it casts over the white altar; the golden tabernacle, and the two angels guarding so silently; the atmosphere so still and peaceful; red roses breathing their fragrant glory on God's altar; our prayers which are uttered so earnestly there in the shadows; and finally, our reluctance to leave. As we gaze, however, we are content, for we see those glistening hosts of vigilant watchers symbolized by the statues of the two angels, silently keeping their watch, and prayerfully, lovingly, adoringly voicing the angel song, "Gloria."

Apropos of nothing—
Have you "sown" your curtain today?

Before the last issue of the Courier we were quite positive that no one ever read passed on it after the first Courier of this the editorials, but take special notice of every letter thereof.

Keats can laud this season And artists paint its gold, But to me it means but one thing,
It is the year grown old.

For then the world is young again And breathes with life anew.

Faculty and Students Hold Housewarming

THE faculty and students of Clarke were hostesses to friends and patrons at an open-house reception, Friday evening, October 14, from 7 to 9 o'clock.

The guests entered Mt. St. Joseph hall where they registered and were received by members of the faculty and student-body. They were then conducted through the college buildings by student hostesses.

Mary Francis Clarke hall took on a very festive air for the occasion.

Resident students were at home to the guests. Precious pink elephants, vari-colored dogs, and polka dot cats were on hand to greet the visitors. Much originality was revealed in the pleasing arrangements and color schemes of the rooms. Pennants, gay coverings and unique knick-knacks gave the rooms a true college aspect.

The guests were also taken through the classrooms, the chapel, gymnasium, bowling alleys and swimming pool.

Refreshments were served the visitors in the Social room of the Residence hall.

Officers of Clarke Club Convene

The officers of the Dubuque Clarke club met at the home of Miss Ruth Murray, president, 175 Alpine Street, on Friday, October 14, at 4:30 p. m. for the purpose of formulating their financial and entertainment plans for the current season.

The officers are: Miss Ruth Murray, president; Miss Mary Miller, first vice-president; Miss Katherine Becker, second vice-president; Miss Virginia O'Rourke, third vice-president; Miss Catherine McCarten, secretary; Miss Esther Meyers, treasurer; Miss Mary Starr, senior representative; Miss Mary Frances Heller, junior representative; and Miss Elizabeth Bain, sophomore representative.

Plans were made for the entire club to attend Mass and hold a breakfast at Clarke college. October 23 was suggested as a tentative date.

Mission Crusade Unit Chooses Officers

The Catholic Students' Mission Crusade of Clarke college met to elect officers of their organization for the following year, on October 14, in the City Student hall.

The result of the election was as follows: president, Ruth Kress; vice-president, Veronica Murphy; secretary, Mary Ellen Evans; spiritual treasurer, Virginia Donovan; treasurer, Margaret Conlan.

The Clarke Mission Crusaders took part in the "Ritual of Initiation" which was presented on Wednesday, October 19, at Columbia College as a feature of the Catholic Rural Life Conference. The ceremony enacted the reception of twenty four new knights and ladies.

It was estimated that about one hundred students from the Catholic Schools of Dubuque participated. "Lady Religion", "Joan of Arc", and their attendant ladies were present for the questioning of the candidates before the "Suzerain". Following the pledge and knighting, they, in the company of "St. Louis" conducted the new members into the presence of the King. Solemn Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament concluded the ceremonies.

Duo Recital Entertains Appreciative Audience

MARY Krakowski and Magdalen Massmann left an indelible impression in the minds of their large and appreciative audience after their appearance in recital in Clarke College auditorium Tuesday evening, Oct. 11. Both soloists were at their best, and the concert of well-chosen masterpieces progressed with verve and personality.

Miss Krakowski at once endeared herself to her audience with her disarming manner and exquisite soprano voice. In the higher registers her voice was superb, and in the low regions it possessed all the full quality and rich tone of the contralto. This is a unique distinction for a soprano.

Perhaps, of the entire selection of pieces, which ranged from the folk ballad to operatic aria, the favorite was a benignly beautiful song, "The Wild Rose," the words and music of which were composed by two Sisters of Charity of Clarke College.

Miss Massmann's accompanying was unobtrusive and tasteful and her solo entrances were magnificent. The dynamics and energy of her playing seemed almost unbelievable in the prodigious works she essayed, and her maturity of understanding bespoke the soul of a genuine artist.

The members of the Home Economics club met last week to elect its officers and form its plans for the coming year.

The officers elected were: Miss Margaret Conlan, president; Miss Mary Prendergast, vice-president; Miss Honore McLees, treasurer; and Miss Vivian O'Neil, secretary.

The Home Economics club is organizing this year with the aim of cooperating with other societies, especially the Social Activity committee of the Sodality, whose purpose is to help the poor by supplying food and clothes.

The members will study the present economic conditions and will make inquiries into the ways in which home-economists can better these conditions.

Life Saving Corps Officers Elected for 1932-1933

The Clarke college Life Saving Corps, a newly organized swimming club, elected officers for the coming year at a meeting held on Thursday, October 6.

Miss Frances Mitchell, Sioux City, Ia., was elected president of the organization; Miss Anne Mullen, Chicago, Secretary-Treasurer; and Miss Dorothy Kolfenbach, Dubuque, Social Chairman.
